The Risk Is Real

Age discrimination

A 59-year-old manager was fired for alienating employees and customers. He filed a discrimination charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, claiming his age was the reason for his termination. He later sued the company for lost wages, benefits, and emotional distress compensation.

Resolved with the insured paying $250,000, plus more than $60,000 in defense costs.

Wrongful termination

A mid-level supervisor with a history of performance problems was fired and sued the company for wrongful termination. The supervisor is seeking back pay, front pay, attorney's fees, and special and punitive damages.

Resolved with the insured paying $350,000, plus $130,000 in defense costs

Sexual harassment, gender discrimination

Female claimants at a national not-for-profit accused the CEO and other leaders of systemic sexual harassment, assault, gender discrimination, and retaliation over more than a decade. They demanded millions of dollars and sought changes within the organization to prevent future violations.

Confidential resolution was reached with the insured paying less than $1 million.
